

ABSTRACT OF THE DISCLOSURE

A method for call forwarding in a communications network in which a single first subscriber line and at least one second subscriber line provided for a call transfer originating from the first subscriber line are assigned to a call acceptance group. A 5 call made to the first subscriber line is forwarded within the call acceptance group to the second subscriber line and/or is signaled there for call answering.